autobiographical texts in this multilayered framework of inquiry, and my focus of interest in the examination of these texts is how they posit the body in relation to, as well as in contrast with, the autobiographical subject, and how gender becomes part of this narrative construction.

Gender differences in the emotional intensity and content of autobiographical memory (AM) are inconsistent across studies, and may be influenced as much by gender identity as by categorical gender. To explore this question, data were collected from 196 participants (age 18–40), split evenly between men and women.
